Assessment Plan for Kent City Visual Arts Courses:

Studio Practices - To maintain a productive and creative studio atmosphere, artists exhibit specific habits and behaviors. These characteristics ensure productivity for the artist and their peers by creating an environment conducive to learning, growing, and creating. Kent City student artists are expected to practice studio safety, maintenance of a clean and organized studio space, and to exhibit positive learning behaviors including cooperation, focus, and active listening.

Sketchbooks (Secondary only) - Sketchbooks provide an informal means of exploration, experimentation, and reflection for artists. Through these practices, artists are able to develop their ideas and skills.

Vocabulary - Artists use specific vocabulary while discussing their work. As we grow as artists, our vocabulary should as well. Student artists are expected to use appropriate vocabulary in class discussion, critiques, and written form. Occasional vocabulary quizzes may also be given at the secondary level.

Artist Statements - Written reflection done by the student artist exploring their achievements and learning in a particular work. Also, meant to shed light into process and concept for the viewer.

Critique - Formal or informal reflection upon works by master artists, their peers, and themselves, focusing on technique, aesthetic, and concept. These may occur in small groups, whole class, one-on-one with the instructor, or in written form.

Projects - The most frequent and formal assessments in the visual arts courses. Rubrics are used to assess students achievement of criteria set for each project.

Portfolio - Summative assessment - A collection of the students work demonstrating their growth throughout the course. At the secondary level, students will prepare a written reflection to further elaborate on their learning and growth to accompany their portfolio.

Adjudication and Exhibition - Periodically, student work may be entered in exhibitions and competitions outside of Kent City, providing opportunities for recognition, awards, and accolade, at the regional, state, and even national level. Each of these opportunities brings with it acknowledgement not only for the student but for the art program as well.
